CANADIAN STUDIES PROGRAM

Canadian Studies Program

The Canadian Studies Program is an interdisciplinary and internationally focused program that seeks to broaden the student's understanding of Canadian society, past and present. The program sponsors Canadian Studies courses and is active in bringing distinguished speakers to campus to discuss topics including the arts, politics, history, and First Nations issues. The program sponsors many study trips to Canada. In recent years students and faculty have traveled together to Montréal, Toronto, and Halifax, in order to study and visit health and social assistance agencies, community organizations representing Canada's multicultural society, and First Nations agencies, including Kahnawake, the Mohawk Reserve in Québec.

The Canadian Studies Program sponsors the Canadian Studies Minor, which is an excellent program of study for students seeking a cross-cultural and internationally-focused education. The minor complements fields such as business, health care, teaching, and human services.

Canada Club

The Canada Club is a student-directed organization. It sponsors trips to Canada, and hosts a variety of speakers from Canada. All students interested in Canada are invited to join.

Seminars and Workshops

Each year, Canadian Studies brings to campus speakers on a wide variety of Canadian topics. Among the speakers on campus in recent years have been Canadian Consul General, Pamela Wallin (one of Canada's best known and most respected television broadcast journalists), General Lewis MacKenzie (former commander-in-chief of United Nations forces), Professor Michael Behiels (University of Ottawa, history and political science and an expert on Canadian federalism and political rights of First Nations), and Professor Gerald Alfred (University of Victoria, expert on Mohawk and other First Nation issues). The audience for the talks include students, faculty, staff and community groups.

International Linkages

We encourage Eastern students to study in Canada, and we participate in both the New England/Québec and New England/Nova Scotia Student Exchange Programs. Our students have studied at McGill and Concordia Universities in Montréal. In addition, we have received exchange students from Laval, Sherbrooke, and Concordia Universities. Faculty have studied at Université du Québec à Trois Rivières and Collège Bois de Boulogne. Finally, faculty have presented papers at many Canadian meetings and universities, including Brock University, University of British Columbia, York University, Waterloo University, Cariboo University, and Yukon College.

Canadian Collections

The J. Eugene Smith Library houses a Canadian collection of timely and important government documents. The library has an excellent collection of current books, scholarly journals, and periodicals devoted to Canada, including a daily subscription to the Globe and Mail.

The Canadian Studies interdisciplinary minor requires 15 credits in CAS courses.
