Free Interactive Workshops at ECSU

WILLIMANTIC, CT— A series of workshops demonstrating desktop publishing, digital photography and web design will be offered by The Office of Professional Development on February 5, 6 and 7th on Eastern Connecticut State University campus.

The workshops are free and open to the public. Registration deadline is February 1st.

On February 5th, instructor Craig Samson, will demonstrate the aspects of design and usability that separate amateur websites from professionals. Samson will introduce the Professional Web Design Certification Program and discuss planning a website, using Microsoft FrontPage 2002, Macromedia Fireworks MX to create web graphics, and how to add JavaScript for interactivity.

If your overwhelmed by the thoughts of purchasing a digital camera the second workshop will boost your confidence. On February 6th, Will Ayers will explore 2 of the 10 factors to consider when purchasing a digital camera, then follow, with a Digital Photography and Photoshop Workshop where you can watch the magic and fun of digital editing as he adds President Bush to all American's family's Thanksgiving dinner. This mini workshop will explore the possibilities and skills needed to create professional and digital magic with Photoshop.

On February 7th graphic designer, Marlene Ayers explores one of the four principles needed to design effective and professional publications by evaluating existing print materials. In
