Section I.c Enrollment

Provide the number of students in the teacher preparation program in the following categories. Note that you must report on the number of students by ethnicity and race separately. Individuals who are non-Hispanic/Latino will be reported in one of the race categories. For the purpose of Title II reporting, an enrolled student is defined as a student who has been admitted to a teacher preparation program, but who has not completed the program during the academic year being reported. An individual who completed the program during the academic year being reported is counted as a program completer and not an enrolled student.

COURSEWORK AND FIELD EXPERIENCES

Professional and pedagogical knowledge and skills are developed through the professional education core, methods courses specific to the teaching content field, course-based field experiences, and student teaching. Through these courses and clinical experiences, candidates develop the ability to plan, deliver, and assess meaningful learning experiences for all students. The courses and clinical experiences also develop candidates' ability to reflect on their practice and make the necessary adjustments to enhance student learning and to consider school, family, and community contexts in connecting concepts to students' prior experience to make learning relevant and meaningful. Professional and pedagogical knowledge and skills are addressed in all strands of the conceptual framework and are assessed through the professional program admissions process, candidate work samples, the portfolio, Student Teaching Evaluation Rubric, grade point average in the professional education courses, exit interview (i.e., early childhood program), and follow-up surveys of graduates.

The Education Unit only prepares special education teachers in Early Childhood Education (a dual certification program) and general education candidates receive training in providing instruction to children with disabilities in both special education courses and within methods courses (content specific differentiated instruction methods). General education teachers currently receive training in providing instruction to limited English proficient students in their required (state statute) ELL course and within content-specific methods courses. General education teachers are placed in a variety of field experiences, including low-income/urban, rural, and suburban sites and this is tracked in our education database. A pre-student teaching course has also been added in the elementary and secondary undergraduate and graduate certification programs.

Our certification programs prepare teachers to integrate technology effectively into curricula and instruction, and to use technology effectively to collect, manage, and analyze data in order to improve teaching and learning for the purpose of increasing student academic achievement. Initially three courses are required based on graduate, undergraduate or early childhood certification. While these courses are similar, they are not identical. EDU 250/COM 250/CSC 250:Digital Video for Education (Undergraduate) is required for all students applying for admission to our Elementary and Secondary certification programs. EDU 553: Computers in the Classroom and Curriculum is our corresponding graduate course for these majors and is taken by students within the certification program. ECE 512: Technology in the Early Childhood Classroom is required for all early childhood certification graduate students. All three courses focus on the ISTE standards. Once admitted to certification programs, technology is integrated into coursework to model integration appropriate to specific grade levels. Technology must be used when producing lesson plans (lesson plan format and rubric has technology use sections) and the student teaching portfolio required in methods courses and the student teaching seminar.
