“Where Should The Birds Fly” is the first film about Gaza made by Palestinians. It is the story of two young women – survivors. Mona Samouni, now 12 years old, draws to express herself and the filmmaker, Fida Qishta, now 27, represent the spirit and future of Palestinians. The film is a visual documentation, but it is so much more. It reveals the strength and hope, the humanity and humor that flourishes among the people of Gaza.
